Directors Notes: When I was choosing what the theme of this year would be I kept going back to good vs bad. I have found that figuring out the difference is not always black and white. I wanted to make the students look at things in a different light. While I don't condone what a lot of the characters in the shows do, it's important to try to find where their point of view is coming from. Having all of the students play villains is making them look at others in a different way. I wanted the students to really step outside of their performance comfort zone and really play the villain roles. I also realize that while it is not good to be bad, in musical theater it sure is fun!
